Irvine-based Plantscapers, Inc. received the award for a commercial project under 35,000 square feet by integrating a "high tech" theme element that was envisioned for the prestigious offices of Jones Day. The law firm is among the world's largest and most geographically diverse and provides representation to more than half of the Fortune 500 companies.

Plantscapers, Inc. President Julie Farrow said it was an honor to receive this coveted award from the IIDA. "We continually strive to remain in the forefront of design innovation and it is such as privilege to be recognized in this way," Farrow said. "We look forward to working in partnership on many more brilliant designs with Sandi Warneke in the future," she added. "It was an outstanding design team!"

Jeanne Smolinski, a design consultant for Plantscapers, Inc., was called in on the Jones Day Project by the leading global architectural, design and planning firm, Gensler. Smolinski worked with Sandi Warneke, collaborating with her distinct expertise to create a dramatic vision of nature both inside and outside the law firm's conference room. Their shared vision created a stunning design produced with two high-end silk replicas of equisetum (horsetail) on each side of the conference room's glass doors.

The plants were presented in a 38-inch tapered, elegant rectangular planters made of an extraordinary glazed fiberglass rounding the top with thumbnail-sized, natural-colored pebbles.

Since 1981 Plantscapers, Inc. has served all areas of Orange, Los Angeles, Riverside and San Diego counties. This prestigious interior design and interior landscaping company is widely recognized for providing clients with the finest quality work, excellent customer care and cutting-edge designs.
